PLANNING COMMITTEE

Student towers would have no parking spots for tenants

Lucy Scholey
Metro | Ottawa

A pair of 26-storey student apartment towers in downtown Ottawa may be built without resident parking and not everyone is happy about it.

An Ottawa planning committee ruled on Tuesday that the Textbook Student Suites Inc. project at Rideau and Besserer could forgo its required parking minimum of 164 spaces. Instead, the mixed-use towers would be built with just 14 visitor parking spots.

The reason is that to meet the minimum-parking limit, the developer would have to build an underground parking garage, explained city staff. That would mean higher rental fees for cash-strapped students.

The development is also close to a future light rail transit station, which will be running in 2018 — before anyone moves into the towers.

"In the urban core, we want to encourage folks to not have a vehicle," said River Coun. Riley Brockington.

Janet Bradley, a lawyer representing Claridge — a competing development firm — argued that eliminating the parking lot would result in illegal parking downtown. "It leads to a cruising-around effect," she said.

College Coun. Rick Chiarelli, said there's a "constant problem" in his ward of students parking on neighbouring streets.

"My community was promised that this kind of thing would never happen," he said.

In the end, he was the only councillor who dissented on the parking minimum.

The project will go to council for final approval.

5 TAKEAWAYS FROM A NEW REPORT ON ENDING HOMELESSNESS IN OTTAWA

The Alliance to End Homelessness Ottawa released it 2015 Progress Report at city hall Tuesday. Executive director Mike Bulthuis says he feels "a sense of hope" this year. Here are some of the report's insights. SARA ERICSSON FOR METRO

1 Length of stays down, visits up

The average length of a shelter stay in Ottawa has decreased five days since 2014, from 78 to 73 days, but this doesn't mean fewer people are using shelters in Ottawa. In fact, 6,825 people stayed in one last year, up from 6,508 people in 2014. The number of people aged 50-plus in shelters has increased over five per cent.

ISTOCK

2 More families using shelters

METRO

Last year, 782 families stayed at emergency shelters — up nearly 11 per cent from 2014 — and nearly 40 per cent of all people in shelters were part of a family. Ottawa families spend an average of 92 days in shelters, compared to the national average of 60. Nearly two thirds of families in shelters were born outside of Canada.

3 Affordability, availability are a problem

ISTOCK

In 2015, only 46 affordable housing options were created. Of those, 34 were rental units while 12 were pre-existing units made available with subsidies through the Ministry of Health and Long-term Care. Bulthuis says this does not address the 10,099 households in Ottawa on wait lists for subsidized housing.

ISTOCK

4 Discussions with city

Last month, the province announced it would invest $178 million over three years towards affordable housing options and other related initiatives. Once the province legislates this funding and determines what to allocate to Ottawa, the city will have to develop policy for it. Bulthuis says this will involve meetings between the alliance, the private sector, home builders and the city to determine "what would we like to see, and what the private sector would be supportive of." He is hopeful this will lead to meaningful results for next year's report.

5 Attracting investors

This year promises more developments and more subsidies, according to the report, but more are needed. Bulthuis says incentives are necessary to encourage more private-sector involvement. He says once the private sector opens up, more non-profit groups will partner with them, stressing that the process works best as a collective one. "I don't think we're saying they need to bear the sole cost of creating affordable housing — we all need to support that."

Bike path closure a surprise

Emma Jackson
Metro | Ottawa

The sudden closure of a bike path in Little Italy took cyclists by surprise Monday morning.

A 600-metre stretch of the newly paved Trillium multi-use pathway, which opened last December beside the O-Train line, will be closed weekdays between Young Street and Carling Avenue until June 10 while the city finishes landscaping and paving work.

But no one knew this was coming until the shutdown started Monday morning.

"Unfortunately, the public was not informed of the scheduled April 25 closure within the city's time-frame standards," said city staffer Carina Duclos.

Preston Street BIA president Lori Mellor said this is typical.

"Our biggest (gripe) with the city is that we're not being consulted on anything," Mellor said. "It's frustrating as all get-out."

Cycling advocate Alex deVries questioned why the entire stretch needed to be closed.

"No one would ever decide to close (a residential street) for six weeks," said deVries.

It's Bike to Work month in May, And Mellor has spent "months and months" working on a new event called Cyclofest scheduled for May 8 .

The path will, in fact, be open for Cyclofest: it's reopening every weekend throughout construction, city staff said.

Tree-cutting policy ineffective: Critics

URBAN CONSERVATION

Report critical of city bylaw to protect mature trees

A group of Kitchissippi residents wants to speak for the trees.

The city's urban tree conservation policy, meant to protect mature trees from being chopped down during development, is flawed and ineffective, critics say.

A permit is required to cut down "distinctive" trees under the bylaw. That means, a tree that measures more than 10 cm in diameter on private lots that are less than one hectare and trees that measure more than 50 cm on lots larger than a hectare.

Staff released a report on tree felling permits at the recent meeting of the city's environment committee, but some said it doesn't go far enough.

Debra Huron, a spokeswoman for Big Trees of Kitchissippi, called the outcome sloppy and unprofessional. She said it doesn't answer the fundamental question — how many tree-cutting permits did residents apply for between 2010 and 2014?

> Once that tree is gone, there's nothing that can be done.
> Coun. Jeff Leiper

"We expected this report to provide not just data but also an analysis on implementation of the bylaw," she said in a news release.

The report, which was done at the request of Coun. Jeff Leiper, compiled a list of tree-felling permits applied for, rejected and issued last year.

Leiper said when the bylaw was first introduced there was a period of education, with property owners given warnings if they cut down trees they shouldn't have.

But Carleton professor and Kitchissippi resident Daniel Buckles said that culture of education has led to a situation where no one takes heed of the bylaw.

The committee asked city staff to come back with more complete information. But, in the meantime, education and enforcement will have to do.

"I understand why people are frustrated," Leiper said. "Because once that tree is gone, there's nothing that can be done. It's gone." JENNIFER MCINTOSH/ METROLAND MEDIA

PARKS CANADA

Residents calling for improved canal access

Haley Ritchie
Metro | Ottawa

Environment Minister Catherine McKenna and the NCC suggested on social media this week they're in discussions about testing the waters with new Rideau Canal access points for canoes and kayaks.

"I definitely support greater canoe & kayak access to the canal downtown," McKenna tweeted on Sunday.

"We can do a lot better than this," she continued, sharing a photo of two residents struggling to tip a large canoe over the canal barrier and into the water.

Last week the Glebe Community Association and the Old Ottawa East Community Association penned an open letter to the minister.

The letter suggests possible locations for floating docks along the downtown neighbourhoods that would allow residents to put boats in the water without the current struggle caused by a railing barrier.

Resident Olivier Whitehouse said he's been in contact with Parks Canada for a year asking the department about a different option for canal access. Whitehouse has asked that Parks Canada unlock a gate along the canal near Waverley Street that would allow access to an already existing dock.

He said a manager from the organization confirmed in January that it was being discussed as a possible option.

The National Capital Commission Twitter account said on Sunday they were "looking into" the Waverley Street gate, but spokesperson Cédric Pelletier said Parks Canada controls the waterway in the summer.

Neither Parks Canada nor McKenna would confirm any plans to add access points. Both said the organization was working on a plan to "enhance visitor experiences" that could include "services and facilities" along the canal.

Summer programming is expected to be released in a few weeks.

University of Ottawa plans to reduce carbon footprint

The University of Ottawa's board of governors has adopted a plan that will see the school reduce the carbon footprint of its investment portfolio by 30 per cent by 2030.

Board chairman Robert Giroux says the decision, which followed 18 months of consultations, is in line with Canada's national climate commitment.

The university says it will create a clean innovations fund and transfer $10 million from its long-term portfolio to provide seed capital for clean technologies. THE CANADIAN PRESS

PM won't budge on terror ransom

PHILIPPINES

One Canadian still being held hostage by Abu Sayyaf group

Prime Minister Justin Trudeau is taking an unyielding approach to the ransom demands of a terrorist group. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Justin Trudeau is taking an uncompromising stance against terrorist kidnappers, vowing that Canada will never pay ransom for the release of hostages.

Moreover, he's promising to press other countries to adopt the same unyielding approach.

The prime minister took the hard line Tuesday as he wrapped up a three-day cabinet retreat that was overshadowed by the death of Canadian John Ridsdel, who was beheaded Monday by Abu Sayyaf militants in the Philippines after seven months of captivity.

Amid speculation about whether the government might pay ransom to release two others still being held captive — Canadian citizen Robert Hall and Norwegian Kjartan Sekkingstad, whom a government official confirmed is a permanent resident of Canada — Trudeau said he wanted "to make one thing perfectly, crystal clear."

"Canada does not and will not pay ransom to terrorists, directly or indirectly," he said.

He said it would encourage terrorists to kidnap more Canadians.

Ridsdel, 68, of Calgary, was one of four tourists — including Hall, Sekkingstad and a Filipino woman — who were kidnapped last Sept. 21 by Abu Sayyaf militants from a marina on southern Samal Island.

Some of Canada's allies, notably France and Italy, have been willing to pay ransom for release of their citizens. Trudeau said he spoke Tuesday with British Prime Minister David Cameron, whose country adheres to the same no-ransom policy as Canada, and they agreed to press others to do the same.

The issue of whether governments acquiesce to the demands of terror groups has long been murky, and is likely to remain an open question regardless of what Trudeau and his fellow leaders decide. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Parents found guilty

The mother of a toddler who died of meningitis began weeping Tuesday after a jury found her and her husband guilty of failing to provide their ill 19-month-old son with the necessaries of life.

David and Collet Stephan testified at their trial in Lethbridge, Alta., that they believed their son had croup or flu, so they treated him for 2-1/2 weeks with remedies that included smoothies with hot peppers, garlic, onions and horseradish.

He eventually stopped breathing and died in hospital. THE CANADIAN PRESS

GENDER PARITY

Clinton hints at equitable cabinet

Justin Trudeau's gender-equal cabinet could soon be replicated in the United States, depending on the outcome of the current American election.

The poll-leading presidential candidate, Hillary Clinton, appeared to indicate intention to follow suit when asked about it in a televised event on the eve of Tuesday's five primaries.

A moderator had asked about the Canadian cabinet: "(Justin Trudeau) promised when he took office that he would have a cabinet that was 50 per cent women, and then he did it … Would you make that same pledge?"

Clinton suggested she would: "I am going to have a cabinet that looks like America, and 50 per cent of America is women, right?"

Canada's gender-balanced cabinet has had attention in the U.S., fuelled partly by how the prime minister responded to a question about it with a shoulder shrug and: "Because it's 2015."

But in reality, Canada didn't blaze that particular trail.

Finland's cabinet is 62 per cent female; Cape Verde's is 53 per cent; Sweden's is 52 per cent; and France's is 50 per cent, according to last year's statistics from the Inter-Parliamentary Union. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Trump fired up in five-state sweep

U.S. ELECTION

The Donald's strong showing a huge blow to his GOP rivals

Donald Trump swept all five Republican primaries Tuesday, a commanding showing across the Northeast that keeps the Republican front-runner on his narrow path to the GOP nomination.

Hillary Clinton was dominant in Democratic contests in Delaware, Maryland and Pennsylvania. She and rival Bernie Sanders were locked in a close race in Connecticut, while the Vermont senator had an edge in Rhode Island, according to early vote counts.

Clinton was aiming to emerge from Tuesday's contests on the brink of becoming the first woman nominated by a major party. She's already increasingly looking past Sanders, even as the senator vows to stay in the race until primary voting ends in June.

Sanders spent Tuesday campaigning in West Virginia, where he drew several thousand people to a lively evening rally. He urged his supporters to recognize that they are "powerful people if you choose to exercise that power."

Donald Trump on Tuesday in New York. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Still, there were some signs that Sanders' campaign was coming to grips with his difficult position. Top aide Tad Devine said that after Tuesday's results were known, "we'll decide what we're going to do going forward."

Trump's victories padded his delegate totals, yet the Republican contest remains chaotic. The businessman is the only candidate left in the three-person race who could possibly clinch the nomination through the regular voting process, yet he could still fall short of the 1,237 delegates he needs.

GOP rivals Ted Cruz and John Kasich are desperately trying to keep him from that magic number and push the race to a convention fight, where complicated rules would govern the nominating process.

Dayko, a four-year-old Labrador, died from a heart attack after an earthquake rescue mission. CITY OF IBARRA FIRE DEPARTMENT

EARTHQUAKE

Ecuador's heroic dog dies suddenly

Rebecca Williams
Metro | Toronto

A rescue dog who died following a mission that saved eight people after Ecuador's devastating earthquake is being hailed a hero.

The City of Ibarra Fire Department announced Dayko, a four-year-old Labrador, suffered a heart attack caused by heatstroke last week.

"Dayko captivated us all with his tender look and his friendly nature," the department wrote on Facebook. "Dayko has left a big void in the canine unit ... and in each one of those who knew him."

Dayko was part of a successful rescue operation in Pedernales following Ecuador's 7.8 magnitude earthquake that has so far killed 650 people.

"This friend of four legs gave his life in the line of duty," the fire department wrote. "Thank you Dayko for your heroic efforts in Pedernales and in various emergencies to which you came," wrote the fire department.

PHILOSOPHER CAT by Jason Logan

ROSEMARY WESTWOOD ON PLAGIARISM ALLEGATIONS

Wente's putative wrongdoing is not on the scale of Jonah Lehrer's or Benny Johnson's, but the allegations are serious and numerous. So why the Globe's kid gloves? Perhaps it's because Wente is, well, Wente.

Exhaustive the Globe's response is not.

After columnist Margaret Wente was again accused of plagiarism this week, the Globe and Mail issued a correction, an apology and a promise it won't be repeated.

All three appeared in a story, which Walrus editor Jonathan Kay noted reads more like a press release, bylined by the public editor Sylvia Stead. A public editor is intended to be an arm's length arbiter of media ethics, which is why a corporate-response-esque piece strikes as odd.

Odd, too, is the fact that while Stead's article quotes liberally from the Globe's code of conduct on plagiarism (which is wide-ranging and vague about what "may" constitute plagiarism) neither Stead, nor the single quote from editor-in-chief David Walmsley, actually uses the word. Instead, euphemisms abound: "similarities," "issue," "without acknowledging," "same phrase… repeated," "fell short of standards," "did not attribute" and "mistakes." Nor did Wente's name appear in the printed correction.

As for what this, Wente's second plagiarism scandal in four years, requires in terms of action by the Globe, we have this promise from Walmsley: "The Opinion team will be working with Peggy to ensure this cannot happen again." That would be again, again.

Let's assume we won't be getting a second column-of-defence from Wente, since what's the point in repeating herself. "I'm far from perfect. I make mistakes. But I'm not a serial plagiarist," she wrote in 2012.

But for the Globe, there are other options than "working with" a writer. And if the paper-most-hoping-to-be-the-New-York-Times wants to be taken seriously on this, it should pick one.

On the harsh end: The Vancouver Province fired a sports columnist in 2008 after he lifted a phrase about Guys and Dolls from Sports Illustrated magazine. Despite the writer's repeated apologies (akin to "Ms. Wente said she deeply regrets these mistakes"), the Province did not budge.

The Times has responded to allegations of plagiarism by its writers with investigations, to varying outcomes (resignations, months-later buyouts). Among the most exhaustive reactions to plagiarism was Wired magazine's hiring of an outside journalist to chart wrongs in the work of science writer Jonah Lehrer; and Buzzfeed's review of more than 500 posts by Benny Johnson.

Wente's putative wrongdoing is not on the scale of Lehrer's or Johnson's, but the allegations are serious and numerous (Canadaland counted six in recent columns). So why the Globe's kid gloves? Perhaps it's because Wente is, well, Wente. She's among the country's most read — and most hate-read — writers. And in the age of media fracturing, a name that draws readers and spurs debate is only rising in value.

So perhaps the Globe's response is tailor-made for a seemingly priceless pundit. Standing behind Wente does appear to be worth more, financially speaking, than offering the public the appearance of a thorough going-over of the allegations. At any rate, it's hard to imagine a lowly intern who clipped whole sentences from other writers getting the same loyal treatment.

And: Would other legacy media brands act any differently to accusations against their crown jewels? I'm not claiming they would; I'm genuinely wondering. Because while it's good business to appear to be ethically beyond reproach, it's bad business to lose your golden calves.

Possible double-standards are elsewhere in this fiasco, too. We know about the allegations because the media critic Carol Wainio has been combing through Wente's work for years, posting her findings intermittently on her blog, Media Culpa. You have to wonder how many other infractions by other writers we're unaware of, thanks to the lack of a dedicated sleuth.

It's also clear by the glee on Twitter that many — and many in the media — love nothing more than a good, juicy Wente controversy. She got one thing absolutely right when she said in 2012 "what I often am is a target for people who don't like what I write."

I've often wondered if they also don't like that she's a woman, since right-wing male voices don't typically elicit the same vitriol. A hate-on for Peggy feels like the admission price to progressive Canada, and progressive Canadian media. Would the scandal be quite so … titillating … if it had another villain?

Perhaps, perhaps not. But I see no holier-than-thous in Wente's second brush with scandal.

Trudeau finally finds right note on terror

Tim Harper

Sometimes you've got to be pissed off.

Justin Trudeau got there this week as his response to terrorism continues its evolution.

The prime minister sounded legitimately angry over the horrible death of Canadian John Ridsdel at the hands of terrorists, and resolute in his statement that this country will not pay terrorist ransoms — directly or indirectly.

Trudeau did not bow to the knee-jerk reaction that some of his opponents urge, he did not send in the JTF2 or pledge to carpet-bomb terrorist strongholds, but sometimes a country needs a leader to channel anger and surely there was anger — along with sympathy for Ridsdel's family and friends — over the brutal and senseless killing of an innocent Canadian.

Trudeau called it what it was, "cold-blooded murder," a change in tone from a man who has often appeared to be overshooting in his quest for perspective and undershooting on the question of outrage.

The no-ransom policy is noble and correct. And risky. This is, in fact, a major testing of a prime minister barely six months into his job. The fate of a second Canadian being held, 50-year-old Robert Hall, hangs in the balance.

Trudeau has downplayed the fear spread by terror attacks, but since becoming Liberal leader in 2013, he has taken on the role of amateur psychologist, appeared shaken, and seemed devoid of genuine outrage.

In his first substantive interview after winning the Liberal leadership three years ago, bombs had just killed three and maimed more than 200 at the Boston Marathon, and Trudeau spoke of "root causes" of terror with the CBC's Peter Mansbridge, leading Stephen Harper to accuse him of "rationalizing" terror attacks.

In many ways, Trudeau's default position was to rise above the fray, a mien much like that of Barack Obama, who, as New York Times Maureen Dowd wrote after the recent Brussels attacks, remains "too cool for school."

But there has since been an unmistakable change.

Last November, the new prime minister seemed shaken by the attacks in Paris.

"These terrorist attacks are deeply worrying and obviously unsettling to people around the world," he said, without specifically condemning them.

A few months later, following the Brussels attacks, he found his outrage.

"This cannot and will not be tolerated. Canada strongly condemns these cowardly acts."

Trudeau is no longer above the fray and he has been forced to react with resolve he lacked in 2013. But the fate of Hall largely rests with him and there can be no tougher test of a prime minister's resolve than that.

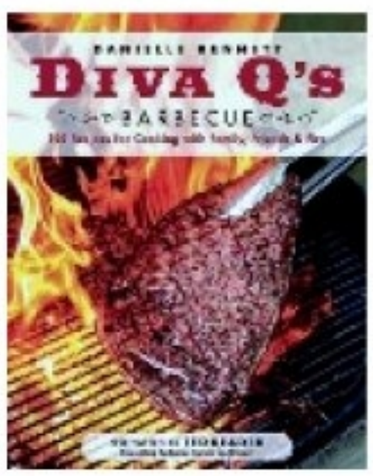
BOOK EXCERPT DIVA Q'S BARBECUE: 195 RECIPES FOR COOKING WITH FAMILY, FRIENDS & FIRE BY DANIELLE BENNETT

Flank steak, made fancy



Diva Q's (a.k.a. Danielle Bennett's) backyard barbecue book is packed with simple recipes for casual, down-to-earth family food. Get started with the six recipes you need to know most, then move to chapters on appetizers, pork, bacon, beef, fowl, seafood, sides, salads, slaws, breads and desserts.

EXCERPTED FROM DIVA Q'S BARBEQUE BY DANIELLE BENNETT. COPYRIGHT © 2016 DANIELLE BENNETT. PHOTOGRAPHY BY KEN GOODMAN. PUBLISHED BY APPETITE BY RANDOM HOUSE, A DIVISION OF RANDOM HOUSE OF CANADA LTD., A PENGUIN RANDOM HOUSE COMPANY. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Flank steak is the ugly duckling of the steak world. It isn't nearly as sexy as a porterhouse, nor as attractive as a rib eye. But what flank lacks in beauty, it sure makes up for in flavour. Flank steak needs a marinade, but is an economical cut that can feed a lot of people when it's sliced thinly across the grain.

Rosemary-Garlic Marinated Flank Steak

Makes six servings
Prep: 20 minutes
Marinate: overnight
Cook: 10 to 12 minutes

Ingredients:
- 1 flank steak (about 2 lb)
- Sea salt for serving

For the marinade:
- 1 cup soy sauce
- 1/2 cup rice wine vinegar
- 1/4 cup finely chopped fresh rosemary leaves
- 2 tbsp minced garlic
- 2 tbsp sorghum syrup (see sidebar)
- 1 tbsp granulated onion
- 1 tbsp coarsely ground black pepper (butcher grind)

Flank steak is best served rare to medium rare. KEN GOODMAN/DIVA Q'S BARBECUE

Directions:

1. Mix together all the marinade ingredients in a medium bowl. Place the flank steak in a 1-gallon resealable freezer bag. Pour the marinade over the flank steak, then seal the bag, squeezing to remove as much air as possible.

2. Refrigerate overnight, turning the bag once or twice to ensure even distribution of the marinade.

3. Prepare your grill for direct cooking and preheat it to medium- high (375°F to 450°F).

4. Remove the flank steak from the marinade, discarding the remaining marinade. Grill the flank steak, turning once, until the internal temperature reaches 120°F to 130°F for rare to medium-rare, about 10 to 12 minutes. (Flank steaks can vary in thickness, so keep an eye on the steak and don't overcook it; flank is best served rare to medium-rare.)

5. Remove the flank steak from the grill, tent loosely with foil and let rest for 10 minutes. Slice thinly across the grain. I like to sprinkle the slices with sea salt just before serving.

Top a salad with thinly sliced flank steak, or use it to stuff tacos.

SORGHUM

Although referred to as sorghum "molasses" in the southern United States, sorghum syrup is actually made from sorghum grass, not sugar cane. It's an amber, mild-flavored syrup that's slightly sweeter than true molasses. Substitute maple syrup if you can't find it.

Make the Queen Bee's lemonade

TRY IT

Beyoncé's grandmother's recipe recited in her new film

By now you've all slurped up Beyoncé's Lemonade, her sixth studio album that premiered over the weekend. There's likely another week or so of think pieces to gloss over, be it concerning the political and racial themes behind her short film, whether Beyoncé is finally showing vulnerability beyond her ultra-restrained persona, or, most importantly, the identity of Becky With The Good Hair.

In the meantime, you can spill the tea at your next Lemonade viewing party with the actual lemonade recipe Beyoncé recites in the film. For the record here's the original recipe, courtesy of Beyoncé's grandmother Agnez Deréon: "Take one pint of water. Add half a pound of sugar. The juice of eight lemons. The zest of half a lemon. Pour the water from one jug then into the other several times. Strain through a clean napkin."

A super sweet lemonade. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Here is our adapted recipe:

- 1 cup (250 mL) superfine sugar
- Juice of 8 lemons (about 1 1/2 cups/375 mL), strained of pulp and seeds
- Zest of 1/2 lemon (about 1/2 tsp/2 mL)
- Pour water, sugar, lemon juice and lemon zest into a large mixing bowl. Stir until sugar has dissolved. Strain through fine-mesh sieve into a large pitcher. Serve over ice. Makes 1L of lemonade.

The result is a very (very!) sweet lemonade that reminds us of sweet tea, so if you're not used to that level of saccharine add half the sugar first, then more to taste. This would also be good with a fistful of mint leaves and a few shots of bourbon stirred in. Enjoy, Beyhive!

Washington state is the wild west for wines

Though wine is made in every state in America, when you crunch the numbers, 90 per cent of the country's juice flows out of California. A distant second production wise, the wines from the state of Washington are fast becoming the next big thing in North America.

If Seattle is the only image you have of Washington, you'll be surprised to learn its principal wine regions (east of the Cascade Mountains) look more like the set of a Clint Eastwood spaghetti western than your typical grape-growing oasis. With plenty of water, thanks in no small part to the Columbia River, vines (especially Cabernet Sauvignon) thrive in the rustic terrain.

Try Columbia Crest's 2013 H3 Cabernet Sauvignon ($19.95-$23.99). It's a rich, beefy red, making it a perfect partner for meaty pasta dishes.

REVIEW

Spark gets the job done if you're realistic about needs

Jil McIntosh
For Metro Canada

While used cars are usually a less-expensive way to get into vehicle ownership, there are a few manufacturers offering base models competitive with pre-owned. At Chevrolet, that's the base $9,995 Spark.

At that price, you could probably get a used vehicle with more options, but the Spark comes with a full warranty and, for many, is easier to finance.

You don't get all the goodies for that price, and the base Spark comes with a manual transmission, crank-down windows, no power locks, and — the kiss of death for many — no air conditioning. On the base trim, A/C comes bundled with an automatic continuously variable transmission (CVT), bringing the cheapest air-equipped model to $13,895. At its most expensive, the Spark tops out at $18,195.

The Spark uses a 1.4-litre four-cylinder engine that makes just 98 horsepower, but the car's light, and matched with my tester's surprisingly smooth stick shift, it's decently peppy.

The handling could be sharper and the turning radius is wide, but it gets you where you're going. And, as I kept reminding myself, it's 10 grand.

Its closest competitor is the Nissan Micra, and when the Spark's pricing was announced, Nissan dropped its tag by $10 to bring in the Micra at $9,988 and retain its title as Canada's least-expensive automobile.

The Micra is slightly more powerful at 109 horsepower, and its sharper handling and tight turning makes it better to drive, but the Spark gives you a longer powertrain warranty and more content for the cash.

> The handling could be sharper and the turning radius is wide, but it gets you where you're going.

It has 10 airbags to the Micra's six, better published fuel economy, and its large touchscreen infotainment system packs in a rearview camera, phone app integration, and a USB port that the base Micra lacks.

The most important thing with any inexpensive model is to be realistic about what you can and can't live without.

Then compare apples to apples, because a pricier model may ultimately be cheaper when you add the "gotta-have-it" options to a less-expensive one. Still, for many drivers, this base Spark might just have everything they need.

POINTS

- The base model doesn't contain air conditioning and while you can add it to the lowest trim level, you also have to include an automatic transmission.
- The regular Spark lineup runs on gas only, but it's also available as an all-electric.

MARKET POSITION

Built in South Korea, the Spark is only available as a hatchback. It's slightly larger than the Aveo that it replaced, but smaller than the compact Sonic, the next model up in Chevrolet's lineup.

Mirage is a vision of economy

IN BRIEF

Porsche to sacrifice profit growth to fund electric vehicles

Porsche is so serious about developing electrified vehicles that it's willing to sacrifice big profits to fund the investment, the automaker says. After a $765 US upgrade to its Zuffenhausen plant, Porsche will begin building the Mission E electric luxury sports car there in 2020. Altogether, Porsche will invest $1.2 billion US to make additional electrified vehicles possible, reports Reuters. With that level of investment, "it is clear that we can no longer carry out major leaps on (financial) results," said CEO Oliver Blume.

MITSUBISHI

Four-door fix

Already sold in other markets, the sedan version of the Mitsubishi Mirage subcompact is coming to North America this spring. The Japan automaker showed the four-door Mirage G4 at a recent auto show, sporting a suspension tuned specifically for North American ride preferences. It also has bigger brakes than the Mirages sold in other countries. Other than the trunk and mildly different styling, the G4 is largely the same as the updated 2017 Mirage hatchback. The sedan also shares the hatchback's 1.2-litre three-cylinder engine that drives the front wheels through either a five-speed manual transmission or continuously variable "automatic." Horsepower is up four to 78 while the torque is unchanged at 74 pound-feet.

DeRozan rises

RAPTORS
TORONTO LEADS 3-2

Star shooting guard breaks out of slump to score 34 points

DeMar DeRozan finally produced the kind of performance that earned him NBA all-star honours — the result was a crucial Game 5 victory for the Toronto Raptors.

DeRozan poured in 34 points to lift the Raptors 102-99 over the Indiana Pacers, giving Toronto a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven series.

GAME 5 In Toronto

102	99

Kyle Lowry had 14 points, while Bismack Biyombo had 11 points and a game-high 16 rebounds, including seven in the fourth quarter. Jonas Valanciunas chipped in with 11 points, while Norman Powell had 10.

Paul George led Indiana with 39 points.

DeRozan, who'd struggled for three of the four previous games, was superb, shooting 10-for-22 in a nail-biter that saw Toronto trail through three quarters, including an early 17-point deficit.

Trailing 90-77 heading into the fourth, the Raptors buckled down on defence and finally found a rhythm on the offensive end. When Powell pounced on a Pacers turnover and finished with a thunderous dunk to even it up at 92-92 with 6:31 to play, the Air Canada Centre crowd went nuts.

Toronto took a six-point lead on a three by Cory Joseph with 3:26 remaining. A bucket by Myles Turner with just over a minute to play made it a four-point game, then Solomon Hill nailed a three to cut it to one.

DeRozan's final pair of free throws sealed the victory after a Hill three-pointer was ruled to come after the final buzzer.

The sold-out ACC crowd was a sea of red and white, and included Drake — who stood on his feet, hollering at opposing players for the final few minutes — plus Toronto FC players Jozy Altidore and Jonathan Osorio, and two-time Olympic bobsled champ Kaillie Humphries.

Game 6 goes Friday in Indianapolis.

Toronto won Games 2 and 3, while Indy took Games 1 and 4.

CANADA'S SPORTS HALL OF FAME

Class of '16 features Trottier, Clemons

Stanley Cup winner Bryan Trottier, CFL star Mike (Pinball) Clemons and two-time world champion curler Colleen Jones highlight the 2016 inductees into Canada's Sports Hall of Fame.

Trottier won four Cup titles with the New York Islanders team that dominated the NHL in the early 1980s, and two more with the Pittsburgh Penguins later in his career. He also was an assistant coach with the Cup-winning Colorado Avalanche in 2001.

The nine-time NHL all-star was elected to the Hockey Hall of Fame in 1997.

Clemons spent 11 seasons with the Toronto Argonauts as a star running back, leading them to three Grey Cups.

He added another Grey Cup title with Toronto as a coach.

Jones led Canada to world women's curling titles in 2001 and 2004 and skipped her Halifax rink to six Canadian women's championships.

Paralympian Stephanie Dixon, cross-country skier and kayaker Sue Holloway and speedskater Annie Perreault are the other athlete inductees.

RECIPE One-Pot Dijon Chicken

Ceri Marsh & Laura Keogh
For Metro Canada

This dish wins a blue ribbon since it uses lower priced chicken thighs, one pot and pantry staples. In other words, it's a dinner trifecta.

Ready in
Prep time: 20 minutes
Cook time: 30 minutes

Ingredients
- 6 skinless, boneless chicken thighs
- salt and pepper
- 1 teaspoon oil
- 1 minced shallot
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 1/4 cup apple cider
- 1/4 cup low-sodium chicken broth

Directions

1. Preheat the oven to 425°. Generously season chicken with salt and pepper. Add 1 teaspoon oil to a large room-temperature skillet. Add chicken.

2. Place skillet over medium heat and cook, allowing meat to brown and chicken is cooked halfway through, about 10 minutes.

3. Transfer skillet to oven. Roast until chicken is cooked through and golden brown, about 6-8 minutes. Transfer chicken pieces from bottom of skillet to a platter.

4. Return skillet to medium heat. Add shallot and garlic; cook, stirring frequently, until fragrant, about 1 minute.

3. Whisk in Dijon mustard, apple cider, broth and a bit more salt and pepper; cook for about 3 minutes. Return chicken to skillet along with juices that have settled on the platter to rewarm and then serve.

IT'S ALL IN THE STARS Your daily horoscope by Francis Drake

Aries March 21 - April 20
This is a lovely day! It is an especially positive day for dealing with authority figures — parents, bosses, teachers, VIPs and the police. Not only are people friendly, they are sympathetic. (We like.)

Taurus April 21 - May 21
This is a great day to travel or do something out of the ordinary, because you feel adventurous. Explore new ideas and see new places. Break free from your daily routine.

Gemini May 22 - June 21
Discussions about shared property or how to divide something will go well today, because people feel mutually sympathetic. Why not take advantage of these good vibes?

Cancer June 22 - July 23
Relationships with partners and close friends will be warm and friendly today. This is also a good day to talk to members of the general public. Meanwhile, exchanges with bosses are great. Glory hallelujah!

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
This is a positive day at work. You might even want to ask for a raise or a favour from a co-worker, because things are going your way. (Make hay while the sun shines.)

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Fun events will appeal to you today. This is a good day for playful activities with children or a romantic date, because sports, the theater, minivacations and social diversions will please you.

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
This is an excellent day to entertain at home or to deal with family members. Plus, it's an excellent day to explore real-estate opportunities. You might want to buy something for your home.

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Because your communication skills are excellent today, this is a strong time for those of you who sell, market, teach, write or act. Go for broke!

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Business and commerce are favoured today. In fact, many of you might see ways to boost your income or make a little money on the side.

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Today the Moon is in your sign dancing with lucky, moneybags Jupiter. Because Neptune is in the picture as well, you feel sympathetic and easygoing with everyone.

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Solitude in beautiful surroundings will please you today. Why? Because you would rather relax than work.

Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
This is a popular day for Pisces. Enjoy the company of others, especially close friends.
